Walking around books consists of 72 to 88 pages primarily of color photography and a short text describing some of the best surviving examples of military equipment there. On deck books are the same type of book, but deal with naval themes. It's also dealing with marine squadrons in the sea series, which are 104 to 160-page books that chronicle the lives of various warships from keel to final order, whether it's conservation, scrapping or loss in combat.
